DEATH OF PRESIDENT GRANT'S

In our telegraphic columns this morning will be found a Cincinnati dispatch announcing the death of Jesse R. Grant. the aged and venerable father of the President. An account of the death and funeral of Mr. Grant will be found under the telegraphic head. As the deceased held no high official position which gave his name a place in any of the biographical works extant, we can give little of his antecedent history. He is the only man who ever lived to see his son reelected President of the United States. He is regarded by those who knew him as a man of great natural ability, medest and retiring, and strictly honorable

THE conductors of newspapers are not exempt from the annoyances which follow in the wake of every occupotion, yet there are facts in connection with the business which should lend hope to its votaries. SMITH, Congressman elect from North Carolina, has published a letter to his constituents urging the absolute repudiation of the entire State debt, which amounts to $30,000,000.

THE Railroad Monitor shows that the sum of $70,000,000 is required to meet the expenses for the actual wear and tear the expenses for the actual wear and tear of existing railroads in the country during the current year. In addition to this wear and tear expense (which does not include the running expenses of the road), the Monitor estimates that $240,000,000 will be required this year to complete the new lines now projected. The vast extent of our railroad system can be conceived when we reflect that

$70,000,000 a year is now required simply to keep the roads in repair. It averages nearly a million and a half a week, and is more than the whole machinery of the National Government used to cost before the war. To meet ordinary expenses and the expenses of wear and tear, the railroads of the country must earn $225,-000,000 each year before a dollar can be allotted for the payment of dividends or of interest on bonds.— [Sacramento Union. the railro

THE following from the Indianapolis Journal lacks confirmation: A strange story came to the ears of the reporter for the Journal a few days since, which is wouched for by several well known prom-inent citizens, who are cognizant of the facts. A Mr. James Shepherd lost his right foot at the ankle joint, some months ago, by a railroad accident. While am ago, by a railroad accident. While amputation was being performed, a pet female dog watched the operation closely, and seemed in great distress that her master should suffer so. Afterward the dog gave birth to a litter of pupies, every one of which was born with the right fore-foot, just at the ankle, missing.

Ax official report lately published under the suspices of the Board of Trade of England gives some interesting facts relative to the railroad system of that country. It appears that the total capital raised amounted at the end of 1870 to $2,763,440,535, showing an increase of $113,898,872 in railroad investments durring the latter year. The average expense of each mile of railroad, which was $170,-495, for 1858, icreased to $179,715 per mile in 1871. This increase is attributed mainly to the necessity of providing further accommodation for constantly increasing traffic on the older lines and expensive traffic. creasing traffic on the older lines, and es pecially in connection with the traffic on through lines and in the manufacturing
